Yanbu National Petrochemicals

Q2 : Weak earnings; Healthy support at current levels

Yansab reported a weak set of Q2 2019 numbers with bottom-line coming lower than our and consensus expectations, primarily due to increased fixed production costs, up 26% y-o-y even as top-line declined~22% y-o-y mainly due to weak product prices. Though higher on a q-o-q basis, operating rate has come slightly lower than usual Q2 levels (seasonally healthy) as per our calculations, reflecting weak demand situation. MEG prices are at decade low levels, only higher than levels seen during 2009 recession. The consensus expects no quick rebound which implies continued earnings pressure for the next quarter or two even offsetting lower average propane prices (~-23% q-o-q in Q3). Owing to higher fixed costs and muted pricing scenario, we revise our top-line and bottom-line estimates downward. Though 1H19 EPS is at SAR1.26/share, cash flow/sh. is likely to be upwards of SAR2/sh. With limited capex, we expect the company to pay DPS of SAR1.75/sh for 2H 2019 (2019E DPS: SAR3.5/sh). We revise our TP to SAR61.0/sh (from SAR64.0/sh. earlier) but remain Neutral on the stock. Dividend yield at ~6% forms a healthy support level in our view.

Other factors. Commercialization of Ethylene Glycol expansion project early this year could improve Yansab's bottom-line in the medium-term. While MEG prices continues to remain weak, Polyethylene and Polypropylene are seeing signs of pick up (weekly basis). One also would need to watch if the increased costs seen in Q2 could be recurring. Even if the stock declines in the near term due to pricing pressure it could form a good entry point for investors looking at about 3 year horizon. While there are some downside risk factors such as further decline in oil prices, we believe that it is in such bearish periods that best opportunities for cyclical sectors emerge.

Valuation and risks. Yansab has shown strong operational capabilities over the past few years and has a robust balance sheet (net cash position) and healthy FCF generation capabilities. In addition, capex requirements are limited following the completion of MEG expansion project, which helps the company to sustain in the current challenging market conditions. Factoring in the lower-than-expected Q2 results and likely lower product spreads in the near-term, we lower our forward looking estimates. Consequently, we lower our 12m TP to SAR61/share based on an equal mix of DCF (SAR61.2/sh. based on FCF, long term WACC/ cost of equity at 12.3%) and relative valuation (SAR60.8/sh. based on 14x NTM EPS). The stock is currently trading at an P/E of 15.4x on NTM EPS, higher than its 3-year historical average of 14.4x (range 11-18x). Upside risks relate to higher than expected rise in MEG prices, better-than- expected dividends while downside risks may be related to further fall in product price especially, MEG price and any unplanned shutdown.

Explanation of Al Rajhi Capital's rating system

Al Rajhi Capital uses a three-tier rating system based on absolute upside or downside potential for all stocks under its coverage except financial stocks and those few other companies not compliant with Islamic Shariah law:

"Overweight": Our target price is more than 10% above the current share price, and we expect the share price to reach the target on a 12 month time horizon.

"Neutral": We expect the share price to settle at a level between 10% below the current share price and 10% above the current share price on a 12 month time horizon.

"Underweight": Our target price is more than 10% below the current share price, and we expect the share price to reach the target on a 12 month time horizon.

"Target price": We estimate target value per share for every stock we cover. This is normally based on widely accepted methods appropriate to the stock or sector under consideration, e.g. DCF (discounted cash flow) or SoTP (sum of the parts) analysis.

Please note that the achievement of any price target may be impeded by general market and economic trends and other external factors, or if a company's profits or operating performance exceed or fall short of our expectations.
